St. John’s Church
Richmond, VA
1865

Library of Congress
archives
http://www.loc.gov/pictures/resource/cwph.02901/
Note the burned buildings behind these freedmen in Richmond, VA, 1865
Library of Congress archives

http://www.loc.gov/pictures/item/cwp2003005762/PP/
Early KKK garb

Harper’s Weekly
December 19, 1868
Although this particular image was taken in 1908, forty-one years after the story told in Brotherhood, it gives students a good sense for the sort of fruit or vegetable stand one might have encountered at Richmond’s farmers’ market in the late-1800s.

A.B. Westrick
The hash marks on the left indicate the burned district after the Civil War. The block just north of Franklin and 16th Streets is a low-lying, marshy area, unsuitable for building. Solid black indicates a building. Lighter areas indicate open space & terrain markings. The James River runs below (south); the state capitol survived the fire and sits to the northwest of this map at 10th and Bank St. (between 9th and 14th Streets, Franklin is called Bank Street).